Tucson Man Indicted for Sexual Exploitation of Minors

(Phoenix, Ariz. – July 28, 2008) Attorney General Terry Goddard today announced the indictment of David Jerome Green, 37, of Tucson, on charges of sexual exploitation of a minor and attempted sexual exploitation of a minor.

According to the indictment, investigators found 10 images and a movie containing pornographic images of children on Green's home computer in Tucson. Knowingly possessing a visual or print medium in which minors under 15 years of age are engaged in exploitative exhibition or other sexual conduct is considered sexual exploitation of a minor under Arizona law.

If convicted of all charges, Green faces up to 240 years in prison. The indictment is the result of an investigation by Immigrations and Customs Enforcement. Assistant Attorney General Todd Lawson is prosecuting this case. A copy of the indictment is attached.
